College Students Befuddled As Conventions Take Over

If variety is the deciding factor, Bowling Green State University is undoubtedly the convention center of the country. Groups ranging from accordion players to Farm Bureau youth, from bible students to fruit and vegetable inspectors will make their headquarters here throughout the summer.

At present, the Youth Workers Conference is on campus. Forty nine strong, from ten different states, the contingent is receiving two weeks of experience in leadership activities of the youth program of the Lutheran church.

On July 30, the Lutheran Service Volunteers, over 80 young people from local congregations, will arrive not only to have some fun, but also to consider problems of local organizations and also to try to solve them.

The Farm Bureau youth group will arrive August 5, while the Federal and State Fruit and Vegetable Inspectors will sign in the next day, August 11th, the International Music League, mostly accordion and guitar players, will check in about 1300 conventioners and August 17th about 1200 Chicago Bible students will arrive.

The International Music League is going completely international with a unique, special feature from Hawaii. Termed "Lochow," it consists of two freshly cleaned pigs, 100 pounds of ham, 150 chickens, and 100 pounds of fish.

These ingredients are tied together with chicken wire after being wrapped in burlap. A large hole is then dug in the ground (somewhere on campus) and a charcoal fire is built in the bottom. The food is then placed in the hole, covered with dirt, and allowed to cook for four or five hours. The result, it is rumored, is absolutely amazing.

The groups are all housed and given other accommodations on campus. Doing a mammoth job of a definitely confusing and difficult is F. Eugene Beatty, Director of Services, who takes care of all convention arrangements.

Add townspeople, students, air force personnel, faculty members administrative officers and assistants, members of the Cleveland Browns and their staff, people who come to watch the Browns practice, freshmen registering, and others just wandering around with nothing to do (there are some on every campus) to the thousands listed in the above conventions, and looks as if a traffic light will be needed on campus.

Air ROTC Unit To Select Men By Application

Major John C. Wretschko, one of the four officers who will organize and direct the Air Reserve Officers Training Program here at Bowling Green next fall, announced that following the two years of normal ROTC training, students will be selected for admission to an Advanced Course.

This Advanced Course will consist of courses in Flight Operation and Administration or logistics.

The purpose of this Advanced Air ROTC is to develop in prospective college graduates the qualities of leadership and other attributes essential to their advancement as commissioned officers and to prepare them for immediate assignment to specific duties in the Regular Air Force, the Air National Guard, and the AF Reserve.

To be admitted into the course, those students who are eligible will be required to submit a formal written application for admission which will be processed by a Screening Board.

Barkley To Open Fall Artist Series

Vice President Alben W. Barkley will open the 1951-52 Artist Series season with a non-political lecture on Oct. 17, Prof. Wilbur J. Abell, committee chairman disclosed today.

The speech will be in the Men's Gym at 8:15 p.m. There will be an admission fee.

The 72-year-old vice president has notified the Artist Series Committee that his subject is "Americanism For This Hour."

Vice President Barkley will appear on the Detroit Town Hall series at noon Oct. 17, then will travel to Bowling Green to deliver his address.

The third lecture on the tour will be at the University of Michigan on Oct. 18.

Summer Chorus, Pianist Present Concert Friday

The Summer Chorus, under the direction of Dr. James Paul Kennedy, will give its sixth annual concert Friday, August 3, at 8 p.m. To add a touch of informality, the group, which consists of nearly 100 students, faculty, air force personnel, and townspeople, will sing in the PA Auditorium.

Nancy Gross, a sophomore in high school in Toledo, will be guest soloist. She studied piano under Dr. Kennedy for three years and placed first in state-wide competition in a music contest in Columbus. Miss Gross will play Grieg's Concerto in A minor for piano and orchestra.

Abigale Burrell, Marilyn Mercer, and Donna Gillette will sing solos; Jo Ann Dake, and Margaret Wepler will provide piano accompaniment for the soloists.

The choral group has been practicing on Monday and Thursday evenings since summer session began, and under the direction of Dr. Kennedy a well rounded and varied program has been prepared.

The program includes religious numbers, folk songs, and a Sigmund Romberg medley. The first group includes: Psalm 150 ("Praise Ye the Lord") by Cesar Franck, "I Waited for the Lord" by Felix Mendelssohn, and "Gallia" by Charles Gounod.

The folk song selections are: "Song of the Volga Boatman" arranged by Simeone, "After the Ball," by Charles Harris, "It Ain't Necessarily So" by George Gershwin, "Clancy Lowered the Boom," "In My Merry Oldsmobile," and "Comin' Round the Mountain."

The Romberg medley includes: "French Military Marching Song," "The Desert Song," "Deep in My Heart, Dear," "Your Land and My Land," "One Alone," "Golden Days," "Softly As in a Morning Sunrise," "One Kiss," and "Stout-hearted Men."

The concert is free and open to the public.

Dr. Ralph W. McDonald, above, who will become president of Bowling Green State University on September 1, will deliver the commencement address for summer graduates on August 10.

Dr. McDonald currently is executive secretary of the Department of Higher Education in the National Education Association.

Complete details of the commencement program and Dr. McDonald's address will be published in next week's Bee Gee News.

Spiking Of Greens Completed Friday

The Bowling Green State University Golf Course was closed from Tuesday to Thursday last week to allow the greens to be spiked.

Spiking the greens consisted of going over them with a long spiked roller so that they are punctured enough to allow the air and water to get at the roots. After they are spiked they are covered with top dressing and peat moss and then watered and allowed to swell together.

This process was completed in three days and the course was open for play on Friday morning.

New Poems Reveal Cummings Status As Major American Poet

By LOUIS E. BERTONI

Dylan Thomas, the Welsh poet, remarked in a recent article in the "Atlantic" that the best advice he could give reviewers was always to keep one popular poet in mind on whom the reviewer could base his future criticisms. This is the type of literary criticism which the serious critic will avoid as the most dangerous pitfall for a reviewer; but, as Mr. Thomas comments, it is a good example of how devastating Cummings can be, especially when he adopts the belligerent 'wise-boy' attitude.

Fortunately, the book of poems being considered ("Xaipe" by E. E. Cummings) is so unlike other poetry that it must be taken by itself or, only incidentally, with the author's previous work. Cummings is so unique a poet there is literally no one with whom he can be compared. He stands quite alone in the roster of contemporary poets and his position is so impregnable that he has never been plagued with a host of imitators. One look at Cummings' poems is sufficient to make even the solidest poet look askance.

The uniqueness in Cummings is two-fold: technical skill and insight and a happy alliance of these two elements into a harmonic whole. The greatness of Cummings is his ability to unite these two opposites without slighting either.

Skilled Technician

His experiments with technique, the use of language as language, distinct from its moribund nature as grammar, the consistent employment of the vernacular, the endless divisive work with words, the searching out of the character, the integral component parts of words, his parathetical distribution of words into sounds all testify to his skill as a technician.

The same remarkable technical ability is evident in Cummings' concern with the printed page, that is, with how the poem will look on the page, with the relationship between the poet, the reader and the page. To Cummings this is as vital a part of poetry as the material of the poem.

Keen Insight

No other living American poet has Cummings' insight, an insight that is as keen as it is biting, as omnipresent as it is unfailingly correct.

The most obvious things about Cummings' poetry is the satire, simply because it is so broad, direct and so strikingly stated. His satire is as direct as that of Swift. Poem 39 from "Xaipe" . . .

open his head, baby
& you'll find a heart in it
(cracked) . . .

More important, however, and certainly less apparent is Cummings' consuming love for humanity, not the humanity of the radical, the politician or the churchman but the humanity of the people, the individual. What Cummings calls an "IS." His world is the world of the individual, how he thinks, what he sees, feels, tastes, hears. In fact, Cummings has little sympathy for and no patience with abstract humanity.

Interestingly enough the satire in Cummings is always directed at the abstraction and never at the individual, but the sympathy, understanding and love in Cummings is to be found directed to the individual.

Love For Balance

In the long run, the concern for the individual balances the satire of the abstraction. This illustrates another unusual thing about Cummings: his love for equation, balance and equilibrium. So that after closing the book one is convinced that the lyric elements in Cummings balance the satire.

Cummings is, in fact, the only consistently American poet presently writing. His poems are true American lyrics. Poem 7 from "Xaipe" illustrates and in itself is nearly enough support for this contention:

we miss you, jack — tactfully you (with once cocked eyebrow subtracting clichés un by un till the god's truth stads art-naked: you and the fact that rotgut never was brewed which could knock you down (while scotch was your breakfast every night all day) . . .
here's wherever you aren't or are, good luck!
aberdeen plato-rabelais peter jack.

Cummings' world is a rewarding one, a world of which every American ought to be aware. No other present American poetry can match the beauty of lines (and complete poems) like "anyone lived in a pretty how town" and "my father moved through dooms of love." The total poetical output of E. E. Cummings represents some of the greatest poetry of this century.

ROTC Cadets Hit Training Mid-Point At Summer Camp

Today marked the half-way point of the summer six weeks' training program for the 62 Bowling Green students at the Field Artillery ROTC Camp at Fort Bragg.

For many of the cadets, it was their first taste of Army life. Evidence of the tough training could be seen in their sun-bronzed faces, heard by their remarks during off-duty hours, and felt by the men themselves as their infrequently used muscles were put to work.

The training that the cadets are receiving is planned to give them the practical and tactical application of the life of an artillery officer.

During the training period, the cadets receive actual experience in order to enter the service with a background of both classroom and practical experience to enable them to have a general working knowledge of the Field Artillery.

Three Army Areas, the First, Second and Third, are represented in the 1951 camp. Following completion of the camp, most of the cadets will return to their homes and prepare to enter their senior year of college. After graduation, they will be commissioned Second Lieutenants in the Reserve Corps.

Parents Attend Clinic; Watch Speech Therapy

Twelve children and three adults, who have speech and hearing defects, are enrolled in the University's summer speech and therapy clinic.

The clinic, under speech faculty supervision, has cases which include articulation and stuttering problems and repaired cleft palates.

Parents of the clinic children attend a parent education program once a week to observe their children at work and at play.

A lip-reading class for the hard of hearing is also held. This program will be continued in the fall.

Emory O. Windrem and Miss Alice Greiner are in charge of the clinic. Mrs. Floris Arnold teaches the younger children's group.

University Develops Rapidly In 27 Years

Starting on a $10 plot of ground in 1914, the University has grown so that now the buildings alone are estimated at between 10 and 11 million dollars.

At the time of its inception Bowling Green's faculty numbered 14 persons including Dr. Rea McCain, present chairman of the English dept., and Dr. J. Robert Overman, dean Emeritus. Last semester the faculty numbered 253.

The student body has grown from a mere 304 persons to 3700 students enrolled for academic work last semester. This figure represents a four year low for enrollment.

First president was Dr. H. B. Williams, who administered the University from 1914 to 1937. President Roy G. Offenhausser became President in 1937 and served until 1939. After his death Offenhausser was followed by Dr. Frank J. Prout, who recently tendered his resignation following a 12½ year tenure of office. Dr. Ralph W. McDonald will assume the duties of president on Sept. 1.

A building program was launched in 1914, with construction of the Administration bldg., Williams Hall, and Mosely Hall, (the old Science and Agriculture bldg.).

Continuing the building program in 1927, the Library and Men's Gym were built. The new Library addition is scheduled to be completed by the first of the year. In 1931, the Practical Arts bldg., was erected.

Last Spring the new Chapel and the Chemistry bldg., were dedicated.

The auditorium was enlarged in 1937, and the Stadium was also built that year.

In recent years the men's and women's dormitories were built along with Johnston Hospital, Gate Theater, Fine Arts bldg., and the Heating Plant.

Mosely Hall is being repaired at the present time and should be finished by Sept. 15. The Delta Zeta Sorority house should also be finished by that time. The men's dormitories southeast of campus are having study room additions built and plans are being finished on the new Journalism dept., which will be located in the old Heating Plant.

Any person who is not now a member of the Hospital Service Association of Toledo and who may be interested in joining should contact Harry R. Mathias, local secretary, at 123 E. Evers Ave., on Thursday, Aug 2, from 8 to 10 p.m. His phone number is 34411.

Kraft Beats Bates In Golf Tourney

The campus golf tournament ended this week with Frank Kraft defeating Art Bates 2 and 1.

The match was close all the way with both boys finding the range on the short approach shots.

Bates lost one hole by virtue of a lost ball on the ninth hole. His drive was to the left of the green and when the men approached the spot for the second shot they were unable to locate the ball.

The scores indicate the closeness of the match:

Young Organist Has Successful Concert

The Sunday evening organ recital of Bowling Green State University sophomore Arthur Kurtz, Jr., lifted the sagging summer spirits of Bowling Green music lovers.

The youthful organist from West Haven, Conn., presented a program of almost all religious numbers and the entire program showed the many hours of intense practice which went into it.

Best presentation of the evening was Couperin's "Suite for Organ" in which his deliberate style of playing seemed very much at home. The six-part number was rewarding listening for the audience of nearly 50 persons. Mr. Kurtz took all the intricate chords in his stride and had an easy touch.

His presentation of Bach's "Prelude and Fugue in G" seemed a trifle too much for him to handle. He appeared to much better advantage on two other Bach chorale preludes, "O Mensch, Dewein" and "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring."

Dein' Sunde Gross" and the familiar "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring."

Of the contemporary numbers, Bierre's "Carillon" was outstanding. Excellent footwork was combined with his sure touch to bring the recital to a rousing conclusion.
